PA Labor Department Warns of More Unemployment Fraud

The state Department of Labor & Industry is warning of new reports of fraudsters posing as L&I employees on phone calls to Pennsylvanians. The scammers may be telling potential victims that they need personal information to correct an unemployment compensation account issue, including victims who previously received unemployment benefits for which they did not apply. L&I employees do not call, text, or email individuals when they are investigating fraud.

“The Pennsylvania Department of Labor & Industry will never contact you and ask for your personal, private information,” said Secretary of Labor & Industry Jerry Oleksiak. “If you receive a call, email, text, social media message, or other communication seeking information such as your username, password, or full Social Security number, do not provide it. We will never ask you for this information.” To learn more, click here.
