Today in History...

On August 26, 1794, President George Washington wrote to Henry "Light Horse Harry" Lee, Virginia's governor and a former general, regarding the Whiskey Rebellion, an insurrection, in Pennsylvania, that was the first great test of Washington's authority as president of the United States. The Whiskey Rebellion of August 1794 was the product of growing discontentment, which had been expressed as early as 1791, of grain farmers who resented a federal tax imposed on their distillery products. near Pittsburgh and, with fake guillotines at the ready, challenged Washington and the federal government to disperse them.
